

THEY MEET ONCE MORE.

The Joint Committees Held a Long Session Last Night.

The members of the several committees who are investigating the loyalty of Government employees met last evening at the usual place. After roll call Geo. P. Castle of the committee to obtain the official pay rolls reported that he had been successful and presented the pay rolls of every department. These were so complete that the name of every man in the employ of the Government was to be found somewhere on one or the other of them.

The committee on rosters being equally well prepared, there was nothing left but to proceed to the comparison of names, a business which occupied the committee until a late hour.

The result of last night's session is an authentic list of "suspects" from which the list to be presented to the Executive and Advisory Councils will be finally made. This will be done at a special meeting tonight at which every member is requested to be present. This meeting will be an executive one and probably the last to be held.

W. C. T. U.

President Harrison is one of the best speakers in America. In a single campaign he made 340 remarkable addresses, in which he treated every subject pertaining to the weal of the country save that he had not one word to say about the temperance reform. No public man dares to assail it; the liquor power forbids him. The Hon. John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, one of the best Postmaster-Generals, was a man of high character. He made a speech before his Sunday school when the constitutional amendment for prohibition was pending in Pennsylvania. On his return to Washington the Monday morning following, there was such a scene as is not easily described. He was dealt with for his unwisdom in imperilling the party that had first elevated him to his great office. Soon after the president of the W. C. T. U. went to him with a copy of the speech asking if it was correct, as she wished to bring it out in a leaflet for general circulation. He replied that he did not wish the speech published; it had made him trouble enough already. Good man though he is he dare not antagonize the liquor traffic. Grover Cleveland stated in his letter of acceptance that he was opposed to sumptuary laws that dictate what a man shall eat, drink and wear. As a lawyer he knew perfectly well that the laws do dictate what a man shall wear, but he was obeying the mandate of the liquor power which had whispered very closely to him, "You stand by us and we will stand by you; you shall have another term at the White House." And he got it.

TWO MEN IN A BOAT.

A Member of Company F Takes More Water Than Usual.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock yesterday morning two members of Company F, Corporal Philips and Private Gunther, concluded they would like to take a boat ride, and procuring a boat from Shaw & Ball's boathouse they soon made a start. Being more accustomed to handling rifles than oars they soon got into difficulties and in endeavoring to turn the boat around near the lighthouse it capsized, throwing both men into the water. Gunther could not swim a little bit but fortunately Philips could. He righted the boat and got Gunther into it and then swam with the boat back to the boathouse, where Gunther and the boat were both baled out. Were it not for the courage and presence of mind of Corporal Philips there would be a vacancy in the ranks of Company F tonight.

Hospital Flower Society.

At the annual meeting of the Hospital Flower Society a vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. W. G. Irwin for her donation of $250. Mrs. Swanzy was re-elected president, Miss Lewers, vice-president, Miss Von Holt, treasurer, and Miss Pinder, secretary.

Arrested for Incest.

C. F. Dickerman was arrested yesterday charged with incest upon his thirteen-year-old daughter. Dickerman has been in the Government employ as a special officer in one of the saloons. He was lodged in jail and will probably be given a preliminary trial after martial law is declared off.

THE BROOKLYN STRIKE LEADER.

Connelly is a Quiet Little Motorman Who Earned Two Dollars a Day.

The leader of the great Brooklyn trolley strike, which called into active service 8,000 militiamen, is a quiet little motorman who ran a Flushing avenue car in that city. His name is Martin Connelly, and he is master workman of District assembly No. 75, Knights of Labor. He is about 35 years of age and has been hard at work earning his own living since he was a child of 8 years. He was born in Ireland, and his parents died when he was but 7 years old. Friends took him to London, where, young as he was, he secured employment in a cotton mill. At the age of 12 he ran away and went to sea, securing a berth on the National line of steamers plying between Liverpool and New York. He spent three years at sea and then secured a position as a pressman's helper in a New York printing office.

Since then he has worked in brickyards, sugar refineries and machine shops and has piloted street cars and trolley cars through Brooklyn's streets. His pay of $2 a day and his long hours as motorman did not give him much spare money when his wife and the three little Connellys were provided for, or much time for labor politics when his long day's work was done, but years of service as a Knight of Labor and marked talent as a leader of men at last placed him in the important office of master workman of District assembly No. 75, which has jurisdiction over all railroad employees in Brooklyn who are Knights of Labor.

Connelly enjoys the thorough respect of all Brooklyn Knights. He is a quiet, thoughtful man, is thoroughly informed on the news of the world and never speaks until he has carefully weighed a subject in his mind. He is not a finished orator, because he has never had time to do much studying, but when he talks he goes straight to the root of the matter. "He doesn't put on any frills," one of his admirers recently remarked, "but every word he utters counts." He is a man of exemplary habits and is devoted to his wife and children. In politics he has always been a Republican. A little notoriety, which he does not crave, is about all he will get out of the great strike. He expects that all Brooklyn trolley lines will blacklist him hereafter, and that he will be compelled to seek some other means of earning a living.

A FAMOUS DUTCH NOVELIST.

How Maarten Maartens Made a Reputation by Writing in English.

Few will wonder why the famous Dutch novelist chose a nom de plume for his English works when it is remembered that Maarten Maartens' real name is J. von Poerson-Schwartz. He was born in Holland about 38 years ago and has become a thorough cosmopolite. His family were well to do, and the comfortable fortune he inherited permits him to pursue literature without particular regard for financial returns. He was destined for political life and for the law, but he scorned them both. He was admitted to the bar, but would not practice because calling black white and endeavoring to prove it to the satisfaction of judges and juries did not appeal favorably to his artistic temperament. He was sent to an English school as a boy and there gained a command of English that proved very valuable to him later in life. He next attended ed school in Bonn, Germany, where he gained a wide knowledge of the German language and literature. He also spent a number of years in France and began the study of law in Holland.

The ill health of his wife, however, ended this study, much to his relief, and while in Italy he devoted his time to novel writing. The literary outlook in Holland was not promising, and he concluded to write in English. This he did, and his first novel was "The Sin of Joost Avelingh." It was a Dutch story in English language, and the manuscript bore the name Maarten Maartens. When completed, the story started on its travels from publisher to publisher, but no one in the publishing business could be induced to print it. The author, however, was so certain that his book merited an audience that he finally published it at his own expense, and it met with an immediate and striking success in Europe and America. It was translated into several languages, including Dutch, and encouraged by his great success the author worked industriously with his pen. Among his other stories are "An Old Maid's Love," "The Greater Glory," "A Question of Taste," "God's Fool" and "My Lady Nobody."

The novelist spends most of his time at the health resorts of Europe with his invalid wife and their little daughter, but he has a beautiful home in Holland. He has been elected an honorary member of the Authors' club of London and of the Authors' club of New York.

PUSS IN BOOTS.

Is all right a-foot. This is quite necessary, not only for puss, but for every one in town, this time of the year. Keep the feet all right, and health and comfort are apt to be secure. Our stock of footwear embraces pretty much everything in boots and shoes for in and outdoor wear, business and pleasure, town and country. After inspecting our collection of footwear, there's nothing more to see in the way of variety, and certainly no prices can be lower than ours. These figures were made on a little last, and the goods are good enough to last till the flowers come again.
